Xiaomi started rolling out MIUI 12 for its smartphones earlier this year. It has now made some changes in the rollout schedule by removing four Redmi smartphones from the list. Xiaomi will no longer roll out the latest MIUI 12 update for the Redmi 7, Redmi Y3, Redmi 6A and Redmi 6. These phones were scheduled to receive the update in the second phase of the MIUI 12 rollout. The reason behind removing these phones were "compatibility and performance issues", Xiaomi explained in its blog post. Xiaomi informed users of this change through a Telegram group, Fone Arena reported. Xiaomi had listed these four phones along with the Redmi Note 7, Redmi Note 7 Pro, POCO F1 and Mi 10 for the MIUI 12 rollout. Rest of the phones have been updated to the latest MIUI 12 version. Xiaomi launched MIUI 12 earlier this year in May, and it later launched in India in August. It has since started the rollout of MIUI 12 to Redmi, Mi and POCO phones. It hasn't been very long since these phones launched. Redmi 7 launched in March 2019, and Redmi Y3 the following month. Redmi 6A and Redmi 6 are slightly older with both phones having launched in June, 2018. Redmi 7 and Redmi Y3 have received only MIUI 11 so far as both phones launched with MIUI 10. As for the Redmi 6 and Redmi 6A, these phones launched with MIUI 9 and have been updated to MIUI 11. Xiaomi has been providing OS updates even for its older phones so it's surprising for the company to not include phones which are just slightly dated. Redmi 7, Redmi Y3, Redmi 6A, and Redmi 6 will not be updated to MIUI 12, Xiaomi has announced on its official Mi Community forums. The four Redmi phones were originally set to receive the MIUI 12 update in the second phase, along with Redmi Note 7, Redmi Note 7 Pro, Redmi Note 8 Pro, and POCO F1 among other models. However, while some of the other eligible phones received the update in the recent past, the Chinese company has decided to ditch Redmi 7, Redmi Y3, Redmi 6A, and Redmi 6. Xiaomi said in its forums that it decided to not provide MIUI 12 to Redmi 7, Redmi Y3, Redmi 6A, and Redmi 6 due to "compatibility and performance issues." The company, however, didn't provide any clear details about the issues it found on the four phones. FoneArena reported that Xiaomi also informed its users about the update through an official Telegram group. In May, Xiaomi had included Redmi 7, Redmi Y3, Redmi 6A, and Redmi 6 among the phones eligible for MIUI 12. The phones were a part of the list of models that were scheduled to receive the new update in the second phase. The other models included Redmi Note 7, Redmi Note 7 Pro, POCO F1, and Mi 10 that all received the MIUI 12 update in the last few months. Xiaomi's MIUI updates are not chronologically ordered as the company did roll out MIUI 12 for models including the Redmi Y2 that were launched almost a year before the debut of Redmi Y3 and Redmi 7. The Redmi 7 smartphone was launched in March last year, while Redmi Y3 debuted a month later. Also, by not bringing the latest MIUI version, Xiaomi has provided just one major MIUI update on Redmi 7 and Redmi Y3. Both came with MIUI 10 and received MIUI 11 as the last big MIUI update. This is unlike the case of Redmi 6 and Redmi 6A that both originally had a MIUI 9 version but got updated to MIUI 10 and MIUI 11. Is Android One holding back Nokia smartphones in India? Xiaomi MIUI 12 software has had one of the longest lifespans in MIUI history. The update arrived last year with upgrades to features and visual changes over the MIUI 11. However, the update included several performance and stability issues, forcing Xiaomi to push incremental upgrades. At the start of 2021, the Chinese smartphone brand announced the MIUI 12.5 as an incremental upgrade. Earlier this year, when users were hoping for MIUI 13, the company dropped a surprise by announcing another incremental upgrade — MIUI 12.5 Enhanced. There were reports that the Xiaomi Mi MIX 4, released in August, would debut with the MIUI 13. However, Xiaomi's founder Lei Jun said the MIUI 13 needed more polishing. The MIUI 12.5 Enhanced was a stop-gap solution for the all-screen smartphone. The MIUI 12.5 Enhanced has since hit a few phones since then. While some devices have already received the upgraded software, many more are still waiting for the patch. Now, Xiaomi has announced that the update might not reach the Xiaomi Mi A3, which isn't surprising since it runs stock Android as part of the Android One programme. Xiaomi previously cancelled the MIUI 12 update for the Redmi 7 and Redmi Y3. However, the Redmi 7 still received the MIUI 12 and MIUI 12.5 updates.Xiaomi is expected to reveal the MIUI 13 next month. It is likely to release the new MIUI software with its new line of Android 12 smartphones. However, some of the new phones might still run Android 11.
